UK Conference Organised by:

This is the first conference on connected and automated mobility (CAM) jointly organized by the Republic of Korea and the UK. Both countries have been putting continuing effort into promoting bilateral collaboration between policy makers, researchers, technology developers and entrepreneurs.

CAM technology will see future vehicles being rapidly equipped with diverse capabilities such as artificial intelligence for automated driving as well as connectivity via wireless cellular networks. Developing and deploying CAM will raise a wide variety of both technological and social issues related to public regulation, legislation, communication and computing infrastructures, validation of CAM and enabling mobility services.

Distinguished speakers from both countries will present on key challenges, opportunities, and progress in their areas of expertise. The conference will help the audience better understand the technical competence, policies and market deployment strategies of the two countries, and promote international collaboration within the CAM community.
